

Community Health Education

Because prevention lives in the hands of the people.

We meet people where they are: in mosques, marketplaces, schools, barbershops, and IDP camps. Through awareness days, mobile campaigns, and partnerships with local leaders, we help communities understand how infection spreads—and how to stop it.

- Teaching barbers how to clean razors to prevent hepatitis.
- Helping mothers in camps create handwashing stations from recycled materials.
- Training imams to deliver sermons about cleanliness during outbreaks.
- Engaging students to become ambassadors of hygiene in their own homes.

No lectures—just local dialogue, dignity, and tools people can use.
